What Is Rulemaking?

Congress passes the broad statutes that govern us, but many of the details are left to federal agencies to figure out through the rulemaking process.

Generally, rulemaking is governed by the Administrative Procedures Act (APA). The APA defines the basic process generally used by agencies to issue legislative rules.

Sequence for Federal Rulemaking

- Rulemaking initiated by federal agency
- Stakeholder engagement
- Prepare proposed rule (Notice of Proposed Rulemaking or “NPRM”)
- Publication of Proposed Rule in Federal Register
- Public Comment
- Preparation of Final Rule (respond to comments, revise NPRM)
- Publish Final rule

What is a Notice of Proposed Rulemaking (NPRM)?

1. Gives notice to the public that the agency will consider a rule change as a result of statutory change & provide public comment period.
2. Dialogue with the public that explains what the proposed regulations will say and why.
3. Final rule is published with responses to comments
